Inlet and exhaust system

The filter system for the engine inlet air comprises a cyclone type pre-cleaner, and a paper filter which acts as the main filter. The incoming air is made to swirl in the cyclone pre-cleaner. This causes most of the impurities to settle out and collect in the cyclone pre-cleaner dust collector. The paper filter comprises one or two replaceable filter elements. The paper is corrugated and surrounded by a metal support.

The impurities in the air collect at the larger filter element which can be cleaned when necessary. The inner safety filter prevents impurities from entering the engine should the main filter element break, or be fitted incorrectly.

A mechanical or electrical service indicator can be mounted on the filter housing or on the inlet pipework to show when the filter cartridge is clogged. This inlet system also includes the hoses between the air cleaner and the turbocharger and the turbocharger and the intake manifold.

The exhaust manifold is attached to the cylinder head with high tensile bolts without a separate gasket. Retightening of the manifold bolts is unnecessary.

In the marine – and generator engines a liquid cooled exhaust manifold is used, that is connected to the engine cooling liquid circulation (so-called freshwater circulation). These exhaust manifolds are sealed from the liquid circulation part with O-rings in 420-engines and with level seals in 320/320/524-engines.

The turbocharger is turbo-compressor driven by exhaust gas. The compact design of the turbocharger is sensitive to heat even during low revolutions. The turbocharger is lubricated and cooled by the lubrication system of the engine. D/McDill engine is equipped with a by-pass turbocharger where the highest air pressure is adjusted by so-called by-pass channel.

32-13/1

The compressed air is cooled by the air-to-water coils. The air coming from the turbocharger has a temperature about 150°C which is cooled by the cooling water of the engine down to about 55°C.

The cooling coil is mounted on the intake manifold and connected to the engine cooling system. The cooling of the compressed air stabilises the combustion, irrespective of ambient temperature, and minimises the thermal and mechanical load of the engine thus lowering nitric oxides (NO_x).
